

September 7, 2009

For Immediate Release

Behlen Opens Western Engineering and Sales Office

BOISE, IDAHO -- Behlen Building Systems recently opened a western sales and engineering office located in Boise, ID. The new location was established to provide an additional level of focus to builders in the western United States. The new office will be staffed with members of the design engineering and sales support teams.

In addition to the sales and engineering office, Behlen has also established a relationship with a fabricator in the west to contract fabricate Behlen components. This arrangement will allow Behlen to make products much closer to its western builders to reduce shipping costs and increase responsiveness.

As building construction activity begins to increase, Behlen believes the new team will be positioned to help builders in the region service their customers more effectively. Steve Becker, General Manager of Behlen Building Systems stated, "The Behlen team is excited about this progress and we're committed to finding new ways to provide the 'Good Iron – Great Experience' we're known for in the metal building industry."